POLICE CHARGE 29 BREAK NEW PARKING LIMIT

Caskey's Order Followed by Officers, But Mayor Assesses No Fines

SOME DRIVERS LECTURED

Cards Sent to Several to Appear Wednesday

Although Charles O. Caskey, safety director, issued strict orders to the police department to enforce the two-hour parking regulation "to the letter," his superior, Mayor W. J. Graham, had failed at noon Tuesday to assess a single fine for violations.

Police issued 29 tags Monday, the first day the regulation was enforced. Twenty-eight were given for overtime parking and one for a truck exceeding the established length, parking longer than necessary in the restricted district. Six of the tags were issued to cars from out of town.

Eight motorists posted $2 bonds to report later before the mayor.

Six Cards Mailed

What action the mayor would take on those who posted bonds was uncertain. It was understood all those who reported on the first day were "lectured" and released. Six cards were mailed to motorists who failed to report Monday to appear Dec. 2 at 10 a. m.

Some local motorists wondered how the police department would be able to keep a proper check on cars because of the manner in which they were marked. Instead of placing the chalk mark on the tread of the sides were marked. These marks remained on the tires and one motorist reported four marks on his tire.

Mayor Graham is in favor of the parking ordinance since he put a "trial" restriction on parking long before council voted the ordinance.

GOVERNOR CALLS SOLONS

Masquerade Ends; She's a He

FOR six years Charles Richard Clayton of Syracuse, N. Y., wore girl's clothing and was known as "Dolly" Clayton, because, according to the mother, Mrs. John Clayton, it was cheaper to buy girl's clothing than boy's. The masquerade was discovered when a kind-hearted merchant decided to buy the little "girl" some warm clothing. Charles is shown left as a "girl", and right, as he really is.

SOUTH AMERICAN NATIONS CHEER PRES. ROOSEVELT

BUENOS AIRES, Dec. 1 — (UP)—Acclaimed the most popular visitor in Argentine history, President Roosevelt inaugurates the inter-American peace conference today.

From the dais of the chamber of deputies in Argentine's marble-walled capitol, at 4 p. m. (EST) The chief executive of the United States will deliver a speech of 1,500 words—the primary object of his journey of 7,000 miles. His hearers will include the leading statesmen of the Americas.

There was every prospect that conference delegates would form an inter-American anti-war front and break existing trade restrictions. Although President Roosevelt will begin his journey home tomorrow evening, the conference was expected to continue until Dec. 25.

This morning President Roosevelt was a sightseer like any American tourist. He motored to various beauty spots around Buenos Aires—returning to the American embassy for luncheon with the companions of his voyage south.

Some idea of the importance with which President Roosevelt's conference is ranked in the minds of Latin America observers was manifest in the treatment given his arrival by Buenos Aires newspapers.

Mr. Roosevelt forced the Spanish civil war off the front pages for the first time since the beginning of that conflict, while journals of all political faiths united in expressing their wholehearted approval of the conference. Nowhere was there a single discordant note.

AUTOIST DENIES DRIVING CHARGE IN CITY COURT

James Mahoney, 21, of Route 2, Laurelville, denied a charge of driving when intoxicated Monday before Mayor W. J. Graham and his hearing was set for Wednesday at 6:30 p. m. Mahoney remained in the county jail.

Miller Fissell, deputy sheriff, filed the charge in the city court. It is based on a traffic accident Saturday night on Route 56 in which Mabel Bailey, 19, of South Perry, suffered a broken right forearm.

CLEVELAND FIRM BUYS NOTES FOR SCHOOL BUILDING

Field, Richards & Shepard, Inc., Cleveland, were low bidders Monday night on the $50,000 worth of notes sold by the Board of Education to finance the city's share of the expense of the new addition to the high school and Corwin street buildings.

The company's bid on the 12-month notes was one and a quarter per cent interest with a premium of $17. Seven bids were submitted, the highest being 3 per cent.

Notes were sold by the board in anticipation of a bond issue.

The regular meeting of the board will be held Tuesday night.

DISPOSAL PLANT EXPERT SOUGHT BY COUNCILMEN

One of the principal issues before council at its regular session Wednesday evening will be employment of an engineer to assist the city in making plans for a sewage disposal plant.

Members have conferred with several engineers in recent weeks about plans for the plant, but no firm has been employed. The engineers have appeared before council either during recessed sessions or at special committee meetings.

The engineers would assist members in making surveys, determining the size and type of plant wanted, its location, making proper sewer connections and preparing plans for submitting the project to the government for PWA aid.

Insurance Legislation Stressed in Plea For Conference

UP TO LEADERS

Davey Asks Aides for Immediate Action

COLUMBUS, Dec. 1 — (UP)—The Ohio general assembly was asked today by Governor Martin L. Davey to reconvene to take immediate action on unemployment insurance.

In a formal statement, the governor pointed out that because the legislature is technically in session he does not have authority to call a special session and he therefore urged leaders of the senate and house to call their respective chambers into session.

"It is my judgment that immediate action should be taken on the subject of unemployment insurance," the governor said.

INCREASE SHOWN IN SALE OF NEW CARS IN COUNTY

65 Friends Shred Farmer's Corn

That a neighborly feeling exists in the Stoutsville vicinity was proved again recently when 65 members of the Reformed church and brotherhood, with teams, wagons, trucks and tractors, gathered at the home of William Chambers, near Stoutsville, to complete the task interrupted by the tragic death of Frank Chambers several weeks ago. Mr. Chambers died of shock and complications after losing an arm in a corn shredder.

One neighbor writes: "The weather was perfect for such a job. It was a real sight to see so many men marching through a cornfield 80 rods long, comprising 18 acres with 470 shocks of good corn completed in about four hours."

ELSASS TO BE RE-ELECTED

Patronage to be Handed Out as Solons Gather

Clark Hunsicker, Pickaway county's representative, who is expected to be one of the rural leaders in the assembly, will attend the organization meeting in Columbus Wednesday.

COLUMBUS, Dec. 1 — (UP)—The 108 Democratic representatives-elect of the 1937-38 general assembly, constituting an overwhelming majority in the house, will meet in caucus tomorrow to select their speaker, floor leader and other officers and to parcel out patronage in the way of minor house jobs.

The speakership will go to Rep. Frank R. Uible, Cleveland, and Democratic leader in the present house, or to Rep. Al Kalb, Ottawa county, who are the chief contenders for the office. Uible by reason of his services during the last two years, has been a slight favorite over Kalb for the post.

Jacob Davis Considered

Should Uible win the speakership contest, Rep. Jacob E. Davis, Waverly, apparently is slated for the post as Democratic floor leader, with Kalb probably drawing the important finance committee chairmanship.

Other candidates for floor leader include Lody Huml, Cleveland; Richard M. Marlow, Toledo, and, if Uible should fail to win the speakership, (Continued on Page Eight)

APPEALS COURT RULES AGAINST ADKINS' RULING

Common pleas court judgment was reversed Tuesday morning in a decision of the court of appeals filed in the case of the Central Standard Realty Co., Columbus, against Ella N. and L. M. Hosler, Columbus, owners of Pickaway county land.

The realty company obtained a judgment on a cognovit note against the Hoslers for $187 with interest. Their interest in 67 acres of corn was sold at sheriff's sale to M. E. Swackhammer, of Mt. Sterling, on a bid of $225. A motion was filed to set aside the sale on the grounds the price was inadequate. The sale was set aside by Judge J. W. Adkins and Mr. Swackhammer appealed the case. The court of appeals rendered judgment for Mr. Swackhammer.

Cleveland Man Claims Match-Balancing Title

Thomas Staggers, Weakling, at 19, Puts 4,200 Tiny Splinters on Mouth of Beer Bottle

CLEVELAND, Dec. 1.—(UP)—Thomas H. B. Staggers, shyly admitting he was "a weakling at 19," found strength today in the successful completion of a tower of more than 4,200 kitchen matches balanced on the mouth of a beer bottle.

The middle-aged, retired mechanician-therapist, disappointed when a mailman sent the original tower tumbling to the floor by stepping too heavily on the Staggers' front porch, plans to sit up nights until he achieves a tower far exceeding his fondest dreams.

"It should start a national craze," said. "It should spread like fire."

Formula Disclosed

Here's the Staggers' formula for successful match tower construction with beer bottle base architecture:—

"First I drink the beer. Then I place five matches parallel on the mouth of the empty bottle. They form the first row—the foundation. The second row is formed by placing ten matches at right angles to the first, with heads alternating.

"Each additional layer is broader by four matches. You certainly have to be steady about it and figure out the right balance. The first 400 matches are the hardest. The make-or break the pile."

Mrs. Staggers, whose kitchen was the scene of the preliminary construction work, finally succeeded in driving her husband into the parlor where she and daughter Evelyn, 20, deal out matches in lots of 100 to the patient builder.

Just A Curiosity

"I think it's quite a feat but I look at it as just a curiosity," she said.

When Staggers started out, he worked from midnight until 6 (Continued on Page Eight)

FIREMEN NEED MANY OLD TOYS TO AID NEEDY

City Firemen want toys! They have made several appeals for old toys to be rejuvenated and distributed to needy children for Christmas but very few have been received.

Persons who have old toys they no longer want are urged to take them to the fire department as early as possible. Those who have no way to get them to the department should notify firemen and they will call for them.

Firemen hope to avoid a last-minute rush in their repair work. In previous years they received so many toys the week before Christmas they had difficulty getting them all repaired for their distribution.

New Complications Feared As Result of Activities

LONDON, Dec. 1.—(UP)—Thousands of Germans and Frenchmen have arrived in Spain to fight in opposing nationalist and loyalist armies as volunteers, according to reliable news which reached the government today and brought threats of fresh international complications.

A newspaper report that a Russian general and 100 Russian officers were in charge of the government defenses at Malaga has not so far been confirmed by British authorities.

Experts expressed the view that in the case of the thousands of Germans reported to have arrived at Seville, in southern Spain, they could have left Germany only with the knowledge and consent of German authorities owing to the drastic currency restrictions as well as the sharp control on ports of emigration.

Might Evade Authorities

The Frenchmen might conceivably have slipped across the border without knowledge of high authorities.

The figure of 5,000 has been mentioned as the possible total of Germans, who arrived at Cadix in at least two ships and proceeded to Seville. The Frenchmen were supposed to be at Barcelona with the Loyalists.

The British advised were confirmed to the United Press in quarters close to the German embassy. These quarters said the number arrived at Seville was between 2,000 and 3,000 and that they left Germany as "volunteers" and after several thousand French recently reached Barcelona.

Britain Silent

Although deprecating the reported arrival of the Germans, especially if they proved to be troops, the British government, it was stated authoritatively, is itself not taking any steps about it and believes the move does not concern the non-intervention committee, which is empowered.

FIREMEN NEED MANY OLD TOYS TO AID NEEDY

City Firemen want toys! They have made several appeals for old toys to be rejuvenated and distributed to needy children for Christmas but very few have been received.

Persons who have old toys they no longer want are urged to take them to the fire department as early as possible. Those who have no way to get them to the department should notify firemen and they will call for them.

Firemen hope to avoid a last-minute rush in their repair work. In previous years they received so many toys the week before Christmas they had difficulty getting them all repaired for their distribution.

Russian General, Officers Reported With Loyal Troops at Malaga

New Complications Feared As Result of Activities

LONDON, Dec. 1. — (UP)—Thousands of Germans and Frenchmen have arrived in Spain to fight in opposing nationalist and loyalist armies as volunteers, according to reliable news which reached the government today and brought threats of fresh international complications.

A newspaper report that a Russian general and 100 Russian officers were in charge of the government defenses at Malaga has not so far been confirmed by British authorities.

Experts expressed the view that in the case of the thousands of Germans reported to have arrived at Seville, in southern Spain, they could have left Germany only with the knowledge and consent of German authorities owing to the drastic currency restrictions as well as the sharp control on ports of emigration.

Might Evade Authorities

The Frenchmen might conceivably have slipped across the border without knowledge of high authorities.

The figure of 5,000 has been mentioned as the possible total of Germans, who arrived at Cadiz in at least two ships and proceeded to Seville. The Frenchmen were supposed to be at Barcelona with the Loyalists.

The British advice were confirmed to the United Press in quarters close to the German embassy. These quarters said the number arrived at Seville was between 2,000 and 3,000 and that they left Germany as "volunteers" and after several thousand French recently reached Barcelona.

Britain Silent

Although deprecating the reported arrival of the Germans, especially if they proved to be troops, the British government, it was stated authoritatively, is itself not taking any steps about it and believes the move does not concern the non-intervention committee, which is em- (Continued on Page Eight)

DAIRY FACTORS IN OHIO AIRED BY ECONOMIST

Cows Fewest Since 1931
While Population Rate
Shows Steady Gain

PRICE INDEX REPORTED

Guy Miller of OSU Writes
About Conditions

With the number of milk cows per thousand people in the United States the smallest since 1931, and with the rate of population growth likely to exceed the rate at which the number of milk cows per thousand of population is likely to increase, the dairy cattle and milk production outlook becomes increasingly important to both dairy farmers and to everyone who uses milk or dairy products.

There are unfavorable factors as well as favorable factors which are being faced by dairy farmers, and these are outlined in a summary of the dairy cattle and milk production outlook prepared by Guy Miller of the rural economics department Ohio State university.

Following are some of the most important of these factors.

The heavy cow and calf slaughter, as a result of feed shortage because of the drought, is apt to continue until next spring's pasture season.

The price index of milk cows in the United States for the first 10 months of this year was 4.7 per cent less than that of beef cattle, 14 per cent less than hogs, and 18.8 per cent less than lambs.

With grain feed scarce and feed costs relatively high, dairy farmers are not likely to raise an unusual number of heifer calves and produce less butterfat with butterfat prices considerably below the normal relationship between butterfat and hog prices. This fall's increased milk production, brought about by flush pastures after the drought, is expected to be short-lived.

When the numbers of heifers begin to increase, from one to two years will elapse before cow numbers will start their upward trend. The increasing demand for fluid milk and cream will leave less milk available for manufactured dairy products.

Indications are that the price of milk cows should show some rise in the next two or three years, in relation to other livestock prices. Cow prices will probably continue high enough to provide a good market for heifers raised during the next year or two.

Government disease elimination programs will probably call for the slaughter of somewhat fewer dairy cows during the next two years than in the last two. The rise in industrial activity and payrolls in 1936 is causing an increased demand for fluid milk and cream in cities and villages.

With prospects for little change in number of milk cows, any increase in milk production as a result of increased demand and more normal feed supplies, will come largely from increased production per cow — which should assure the dairyman the profit he has to have.

OHIO IS ASKED TO HAVE ENTRY IN GOTHAM FAIR

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 1 — Governor Martin L. Davey of Ohio has been invited by Governor Herbert H. Lehman of New York to have the state of Ohio participate in the New York World's Fair of 1939. Formal invitations of a similar nature have gone forward to the governors of 46 states.

In his letter of invitation, Governor Lehman points out what New York state has already done and intends to do in taking full share in the exposition that is already in process of construction on the Flushing Meadow site in the Borough of Queens, and which is to represent an estimated total investment of $125,000,000.

The New York legislature, he notes, during 1936 passed an act creating the New York State World's Fair Commission of 18 members, and providing funds in aid of this body's investigations looking to the preparation of plans for a state building and exhibit and for active state participation

AT THE CLIFTONA

Edwards Arnold refuses to punch a fellow actor for a film scene.

This hard and fast rule of the hefty star was revealed during the shooting of the most dramatic sequence in Samuel Goldwyn's production of Edna Ferber's "Come And Get It!" at the Cliftona theatre for the last times tonight.

The script required Arnold and Joel McCrea, in the roles of father and son, to engage in a fist fight over the affections of Frances Farmer. Arnold was to take the aggressive.

The scene proceeded with Arnold slapping McCrea's face and working up to a point where he was required to punch the younger actor on the jaw. Then Arnold stopped, went over to Director William Wyler and spoke to him in low tones. As a result, Arnold's double, Bill Hoover, was dressed for the part, took the star's place and sent a punch crashing to McCrea's chin.

"The Magnificent Brute" a giant of a man, is torn between two blondes. That is, two at one time. The battle of the blondes for his affection at the Grand theatre, "The story is taken from Owen Francis' "Big," which ran in Liberty Magazine.

Victor McLaglen, winner of the last Academy award for his outstanding screen performance, is the star of this Universal film, in which he is seen as "Big" Steve Andrews, a swaggering maker of steel.

In the steel mills, Big Steve finds the towering Bill Morgan, his bitterest enemy, already installing as "top" workman. Their hatred flames anew when he defeats Morgan in a test of strength. The tension is increased when Big Steve takes Morgan's girl away from him, and the revengeful Bill plots to ruin his rival by underhand means.

DAIRY FACTORS IN OHIO AIRED BY ECONOMIST

Cows Fewest Since 1931
While Population Rate
Shows Steady Gain

PRICE INDEX REPORTED

Guy Miller of OSU Writes
About Conditions

With the number of milk cows per thousand people in the United States the smallest since 1931, and with the rate of population growth likely to exceed the rate at which the number of milk cows per thousand of population is likely to increase, the dairy cattle and milk production outlook becomes increasingly important to both dairy farmers and to everyone who uses milk or dairy products.

There are unfavorable factors as well as favorable factors which are being faced by dairy farmers, and these are outlined in a summary of the dairy cattle and milk production outlook prepared by Guy Miller of the rural economics department Ohio State university.

Following are some of the most important of these factors.

The heavy cow and calf slaughter, as a result of feed shortage because of the drought, is apt to continue until next spring's pasture season.

The price index of milk cows in the United States for the first 10 months of this year was 4.7 per cent less than that of beef cattle, 14 per cent less than hogs, and 19.8 per cent less than lambs.

With grain feed scarce and feed costs relatively high, dairy farmers are not likely to raise an unusual number of heifer calves and produce less butterfat with butterfat prices considerably below the normal relationship between butterfat and hog prices. This fall's increased milk production, brought about by flush pastures after the drought, is expected to be short-lived.

When the numbers of heifers begin to increase, from one to two years will elapse before cow numbers will start their upward trend. The increasing demand for fluid milk and cream will leave less milk available for manufactured dairy products.

Indications are that the price of milk cows should show some rise in the next two or three years, in relation to other livestock prices. Cow prices will probably continue high enough to provide a good market for heifers raised during the next year or two.

Government disease elimination programs will probably call for the slaughter of somewhat fewer dairy cows during the next two years than in the last two. The rise in industrial activity and payrolls in 1936 is causing an increased demand for fluid milk and cream in cities and villages.

With prospects for little change in number of milk cows, any increase in milk production as a result of increased demand and more normal feed supplies, will come largely from increased production per cow — which should assure the dairyman the profit he has to have.

AT THE CLIFTONA

Edwards Arnold refuses to punch a fellow actor for a film scene.

This hard and fast rule of the hefty star was revealed during the shooting of the most dramatic sequence in Samuel Goldwyn's production of Edna Ferber's "Come and Get It!" at the Cliftona theatre for the last times tonight.

The script required Arnold and Joel McCrea, in the roles of father and son, to engage in a fist fight over the affections of Frances Farmer. Arnold was to take the aggressive.

The scene proceeded with Arnold slapping McCrea's face and working up to a point where he was required to punch the younger actor on the jaw. Then Arnold stopped, went over to Director William Wyler and spoke to him in low tones. As a result, Arnold's double, Bill Hoover, was dressed for the part, took the star's place and sent a punch crashing to McCrea's chin.

AT THE GRAND

"The Magnificent Brute" a giant of a man, is torn between two blondes. That is, two at one time. The battle of the blondes for his affection at the Grand theatre. The story is taken from Owen Francis' "Big," which ran in Liberty Magazine.

Victor McLaglen, winner of the last Academy award for his outstanding screen performance, is the star of this Universal film, in which he is seen as "Big" Steve Andrews, a swaggering maker of steel.

In the steel mills, Big Steve finds the towering Bill Morgan, his bitterest enemy, already installing as "top" workman. Their hatred flames anew when he defeats Morgan in a test of strength. The tension is increased when Big Steve takes Morgan's girl away from him, and the revengeful Bill plots to ruin his rival by underhand means.

AT THE CIRCLE

Heading the cast in support of George Arliss in "East Meets West" in Lucie Mannheim, who recently scored another personal triumph in London for her performance in "Girl Unknown," Ferenc Molnar's new play.

Miss Mannheim, a German Jewish exile, has achieved a great following in the London theatre. Last season her play, "Nina" had a tremendously successful run.

Her only other screen appearance aside from "East Meets West," which is the attraction tonight at the Circle theatre, was in a previous GB picture, "The 39 Steps," where she played the mysterious woman spy.

CONFERS WITH RAYBURN

Many Problems to be Faced by New Congress

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1 — (UP) — Vice-President John N. Garner returned to the capital today more than a month ahead of his usual time to prepare for the convening of congress Jan. 5.

It was reported reliably that he did so at the request of President Roosevelt. With the President in South America, Garner was expected to begin whipping governmental affairs into shape for a smooth-running congressional session.

Accompanied by Mrs. Garner, he returned to Washington from his home in Uvalde, Tex. He went immediately to a hotel room conference with Rep. Sam Rayburn, D., Tex., regarded as administration candidate for majority leader of the new house.

Important matters of New Deal policy during President Roosevelt's second term will be discussed. Democrats will have new overwhelming majorities in both houses as a result of the November landslide election.

Garner is expected to confer soon with Sen. Pat Harrison, D., Miss., chairman of the senate finance committee, on possible tax legislation. No new taxes are expected but some adjustments may be made on existing levies.

Business is agitating for changes in the corporation surplus tax law passed by the last congress. Several "nuisance" taxes are due to expire automatically in 1937 unless extended by congressional action.

WPA REDUCTION TO CONTINUE IN STATE - WATSON

Ohio Administrator Follows Orders From Capital

COLUMBUS, Dec. 1 — (UP) — Reduction of Works Progress Administration quotas in Ohio, which cut nearly 6,000 persons from the work-relief rolls in November, will continue through December, Dr. Carl Watson, state WPA administrator, said today.

Economy restrictions imposed by orders from Washington make the bus, Miss Bertie Richardson, Wilberforce, Scott and Harry Richardson, Camp Ross enrollees spent Thanksgiving with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Richardson.

Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Furniss and children, Esther, Freda and Don were guests of Mr. and Mrs. William Furniss at Darbyville at a turkey dinner Thanksgiving.

reduction necessary, he explained. Workers' organizations in several cities have protested the cuts.

Employment on work-relief projects declined from 149,564 persons the first week in November to 143,675 last week, the WPA statistical division reported. More than 3,000 were dropped last week.

A further drop to 138,000 will be recorded in December, Dr. Watson predicted. The quota then will remain at about that level through January and February, with a further reduction probable in the spring, he said.

The number of projects in operation also is declining. There were 3208 active projects Nov. 4 and 3053 Nov. 25.

The WPA quota-reduction policy made it appear unlikely, Dr. Watson said, that the federal work relief agency will be able to absorb any substantial number of employables now supported by state and county direct relief funds. State budget-planners recently expressed hope that such a shift might be made, in order to reduce state relief costs.

Eastern railroads have not called off their legal fight on the rate cut. Profits for some systems have risen to twelve per cent and the unfamiliar condition is becoming almost unendurable.

HONOLULU (UP) — With the Pacific maritime strike having cut off all food supply from the mainland and other countries, Mrs. Caroline W. Edwards, home economics supervisor of the territorial schools, has begun a series of consultations with school cafeteria managers to provide menus based entirely on island products.

Mrs. Edwards proposes to demonstrate that the islands are self-sufficient as regards all necessary foods, despite habits that have been developed of counting on foreign food supplies.

"The emergency is in the choice of things to eat rather than in the amount of food," she points out. "I don't foresee any difficulty in maintaining a plentiful supply of healthful, wholesome island foods, regardless of any blockade of foodstuffs from other parts of America."

"We can do without mainland fruits and vegetables by concentrating on island products. Our foods here are possibly better vitamin carriers than many of the products of the mainland. We can always prepare a well balanced meal from what we grow and have available on the islands."

THE CHRISTMAS RUSH

THE American people are governed a great deal by their emotions, and they manifest various eccentricities. A stranger from a foreign land would say that the grand rush of the people to buy and send off holiday gifts during the week before Christmas, is a singular manifestation of the national temperament.

Such a stranger would not find fault with the spirit that prompts these gifts. He would say that this custom creates a great deal of happiness. But the idea that all these people should concentrate in crowds to do one thing at the same time, is a thoroughly abnormal proceeding, and one causing much inconvenience and considerable real suffering.

He would say that calm and sensible folks would take pains to attend to this matter a considerable time before the holiday. Thus they would distribute this period of rush over a longer time.

But as it is now, we have this grand scrimmage, and it imposes severe burdens on many. Postal employees dread the holiday season, as a period of intense overwork, when they have to go to their nerves, and keep jumping every minute. Store clerks in many places reach a condition of extreme exhaustion when the holiday comes.

Thus an occasion which was conceived out of sympathy and affection, becomes one that causes suffering for many. The angels sang "Peace on earth and good will to men" at the first Christmas, but there is little peace and good will in idea of forcing people of many occupations to do all this overwork. Shop early, buy early, mail early, and help prevent it.

The money in the main went for useful and necessary purposes and brought hope and a better morale to many a man and his family, who were reaching the end of their resources.

There are typical cases recited by the survey in which men, who had been wounded too severely to take regular employment, had set up small businesses and happiness was attained in a variety of ways. One man and wife satisfied their desire for children by adopting three. Perhaps one of the outstanding cases of the country is that of a veteran who received $1500. ### FDR FEARS FOREIGN AGGRESSION

WASHINGTON—Fully to understand the President's visit to Buenos Aires and his speech before the Pan-American Conference, it is necessary to know something about the very deep conviction he entertains that nations of the Western Hemisphere must stick together.

He believes that European aggression in the great undeveloped areas of South America is not a remote possibility — not much more remote than it was in Ethiopia. And he is determined to build up a solid American front against it.

One of the most revealing conversations he ever had on this subject was with a group of about twenty representatives of church and peace societies. They were being entertained at tea in a meeting arranged by Stanley High, organizer of the "Good Neighbor League."

The conference was friendly, at times featured by bantering by-play, but the peace representatives were nevertheless anxious to put the President and his big navy definitely on the spot.

One of them asked: "Why is it, Mr. President, in view of the State Department's neutrality, your own plans for a Pan-American peace conference, and your general good neighbor policy, that you have an official naval policy of protecting American shipping and trade in any part of the world?"

"Oh, you don't want to pay any attention to any of these Admirals' statement you see in the papers," the President replied with a grin.

QUOTED TEXT

"But I don't refer to newspaper statements I refer to the official naval policy of the United States. It appears to be directly contrary to your policy of neutrality."

"Oh, you've been reading something in the Army and Navy Journal," the President shot back. "That doesn't represent the policy of the United States."

"No, I'm not referring to anything in the Army and Navy Journal." And at this point the peace delegate—a young lady—got up and walked around to where Mr. Roosevelt was seated on a couch and sat down beside him.

"Here," she said, "is the report for 1935 from the Secretary of the Navy to the President. It says that the naval policy of the United States shall be to protect American trade and shipping in any part of the world. That certainly is contrary to your announced policy."

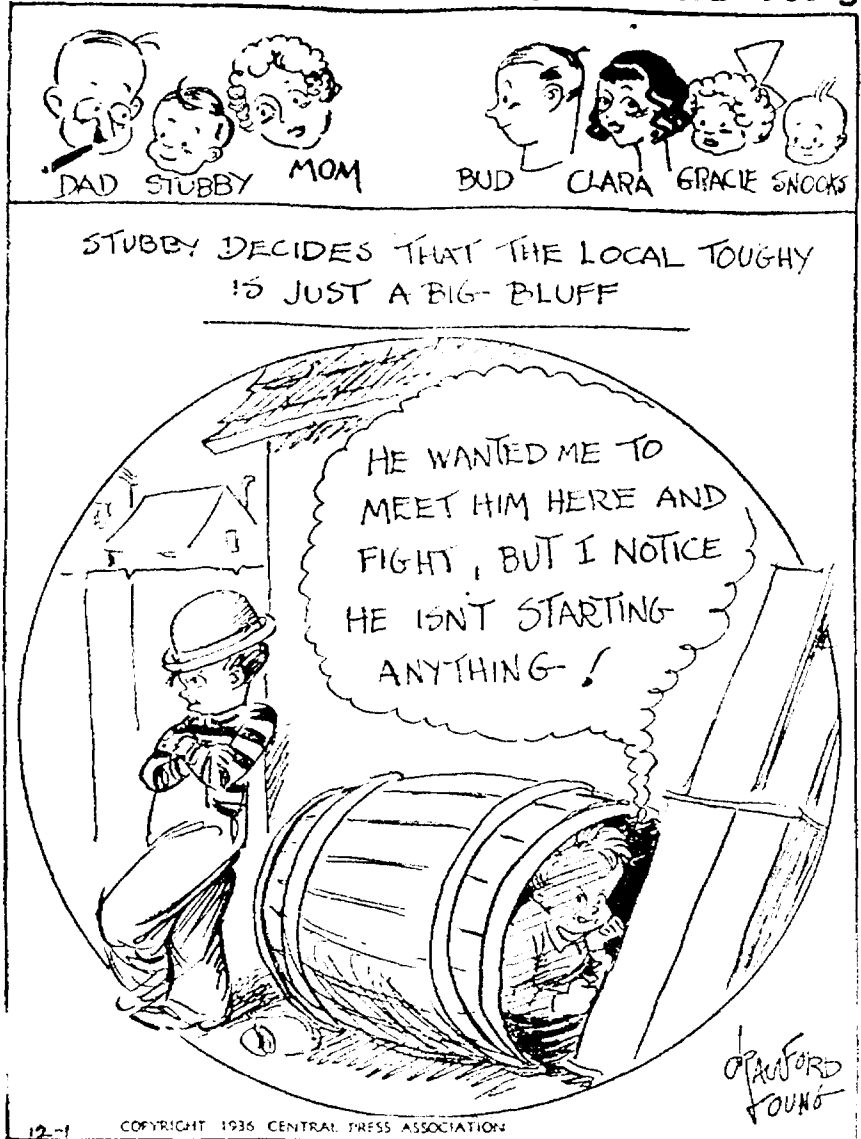

The President picked up the report, read it, exclaimed, "I never saw it before," and slammed it on the table. "No one reads these reports," he said, "and after all, it doesn't make much difference what the Admirals say."

an bought it for $1200, and now he has thirty-five men working for him and is on the road to prosperity. Another bet $800 of his $1000 on Schmeling in his fight with Louis at eight to one and came out winner of $6400.

Of course, some of the money was wasted. But in greater part it went into legitimate channels.

Hopefulness of Tuberculosis Treatment

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

ON A PULLMAN car the other day I ran across a man whom I had not seen for 20 years. Twenty years ago I met him on the street and to my question of how he felt, instead of responding in the routine manner, he said he did not feel at all well. He looked pale and under par. I invited him to come to my office for an examination. Two doctors had recently examined him and had given him a clean bill of health, but I discovered tubercle bacilli in his sputum, and a fairly advanced spot at the apex of one lung. He went to Colorado, took care of himself, is now actively engaged in business and feels perfectly well.

He certainly is an example of the hopefulness of our methods of treatment of not only early, but, in his case, moderately advanced tuberculosis.

The first piece of advice that the patient in such a case should take to heart is just that: the hopefulness of treatment. This treatment depends upon his own co-operation more than on any one particular method of treatment. The second piece of advice which he must learn is not to believe in any magical cure by the use of medicine.

The foremost element in the proper treatment of these cases is rest. Many of the patients, on their own initiative, try to get back their health by violent exercise, always to their detriment. It is best to carry out the first six months of the treatment in a sanatorium, because there they learn the discipline of treatment and how to take care of themselves so they do not transmit the disease to others. But the treatment can be carried out at home in any climate.

Climate is an unimportant element in treatment.

The second most important element in treatment is plenty of good fresh air—out of doors, if possible, in a room with the windows open day and night, summer and winter, at the very least. The body should be kept well warmed, with mittens and a flannel cap, if necessary, but the air should be available to go into the lungs.

Diet should be nutritious, but the old habit of stuffing these patients, especially with starches and sugars, milk, eggs and cream, has been superseded by three sensible meals a day not composed of such rich foods.

Surgery in tuberculosis has proved to be of great value. The lung can be collapsed and put at rest in many ways. Surgery, of course, in tuberculosis of other parts of the body than the lung—the spine, the hip, the knee, or the kidney—has long since proved itself the most important element in the treatment of these conditions.

The BLOODHOUNDS Bay

By WALTER S. MASTERMAN

COPYRIGHT: RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

READ THIS FIRST:

Jack Reid, who has just witnessed the mysterious murder of Sir Henry Severing in the chapel of his ancient abbey, is a never-do-well who has lived by his wits since he left an orphanage. In the chapel to steal a valuable jeweled cross, Reid could not identify Sir Henry's shadow and could raise no alarm for fear of incriminating himself. Next day Reid, who has been posing as an itinerant painter working at the abbey, Colonel Graham, a neighbor, and Eric Colindale, agent of the estate who is in love with Lady Severing, trace the missing Sir Henry to the chapel door by means of bloodhounds. The bloodhounds track Sir Henry's scent to the coffin of his father in the crypt beneath the abbey chapel. Then Colonel Graham, owner of the bloodhounds, announces he will the colonel obtain the services of a young detective, Richard Selden. Back at the abbey, Colonel Graham, Selden and Hutchins, the local police official, go into the crypt and find Sir Henry's body in the coffin of his father. He had been stabbed to death. An urn, containing the ashes of Sir Henry's father, is also in the coffin where it had been placed at his death. During the investigation that follows it is revealed that Sir Henry's leaving a redoubt following his marriage a few years previously.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER 11

THE FACT that Sir Henry had been nearly killed at one time and that it had not been an accident came startlingly from Colindale. Hutchins recalled it. "Yes," he said, "I was called in on that case. Sir Henry was walking in the grounds and someone shot at him and wounded him in the shoulder. We never found out who it was. We might have thought it was an accident, but the bullet had lodged in his shoulder, and it was a Service bullet from a .303 rifle."

"And you never traced the man who fired?"

"It was Colindale who answered. 'It was before my time; in fact it was on account of that attack that the post of agent became vacant.' He regarded Hutchins questioning. Hutchins explained:

"We had no proof—not a shadow of evidence, but the former agent, Everitt, was under suspicion. He had quarreled with Sir Henry, and there were grave doubts about him, but he had an alibi that seemed conclusive."

"Thanks very much," Selden said—rather abruptly, Hutchins thought. "We shall see you again soon, I hope. Come to the Bull Inn and have a talk some time."

Colindale departed, and Hutchins, who was beginning to understand Selden's rather unusual methods, laughed.

"Colindale was not quite correct," he remarked. "The attack may have had the effect of making Sir Henry keep to the house a bit more, but he was a brave man, even reckless, and would not have been scared in that way to become a mere phantasm in a dressing gown. That took place a little later, after Mr. Colindale had been here for some months, and things were being said."

"Quite so. I want to know all about that part, but I think I will get it in my own way, if you don't mind."

James Conolly, the butler, was summoned. He had a massive head quite devoid of hair, and a face like a full moon, with large, restless eyes, and a straight, almost lipless mouth. The face of the perfect butler, discreet, attentive, knowing his own worth, but never presuming. He stood awaiting orders deferentially.

"Please sit down, James," Selden said in the suave voice that commanded while it persuaded. "We want to talk to you as a man, not as a butler. You have known Sir Henry for a very long time?"

"Very many years, sir," James spoke in a firm, uncompromising tone, nothing more than he cared to say should be spoken. Not a word.

"You were here, of course, when Mr. Colindale came as agent?"

"Again Hutchins was struck with admiration at the oblique line of question."

"Yes, sir. I was acting as butler to Sir Henry."

"I suppose you were also present at Sir Henry's wedding?" Selden shot the question at James in a quiet voice; but for a moment the butler was taken off his guard.

"Why, yes, sir. You see, I had been his valet for years, and he asked me to come and see it through."

"In the chapel here?"

"No, sir—the lips closed firmly again—"in London."

"I understand. Sir Henry did not wish to have the wedding here—or was it the bride's wish?"

A troubled look came to James'

"I would rather not discuss that, sir—"

face. "I would rather not discuss it if you don't mind, sir—it is rather painful to me."

Hutchins broke in. "Why, man, what is all this reserve put on for?" he said roughly. "Everyone in the village knows that Sir Henry married a mannequin from a London store, and that was the reason why it was kept quiet."

"I think, Inspector," Selden said severely, "it is hardly fair to ask an old and trusted servant questions involving a scandal. I apologize, James. I won't ask anything more on that. You can't throw any light on this matter which has brought me down from London?"

"You mean, sir, Sir Henry's murder?" For a moment the butler's eyes flashed, and then a mask came down and he resumed the quiet dignity he had shown before.

"Yes, I mean Sir Henry's murder," Selden said slowly and deliberately.

"No, sir. I found him gone from his room this morning and reported the matter to her ladyship and Mr. Colindale. We searched the whole of the premises but found no trace. Then Colonel Graham came with his bloodhounds. I don't know anything more."

"You are in charge of the indoor staff?"

"Yes, sir; in entire charge, I may say. Sir Henry, for some time now, has delegated everything to me inside the house. I pay servants' salaries and give orders."

"You are really the house steward. It's absurd to call you a butler," Selden remarked; and the butler bowed slightly at the compliment.

"I have already questioned all the staff discreetly, I hope, sir, as to whether they heard anything during the night, but it was hardly likely—they live right at the back."

"Really—that's interesting. Now I wonder, James, whether you could draw me a plan of the house."

"I'm afraid that's not much in my line, sir."

Selden took another sheet of writing paper from the desk.

"Well, if I sketch the outline, you can supply the details perhaps and write the names of the rooms."

He smiled at James and drew his outline.

James repeated in general what Colindale had already drawn, but about the back part of the house, James was able to expand.

"This part," he said, "is completely cut off from the rest of the house. The chapel is on one side and the old dining hall on the other. The only connection is by the corridor on the ground floor, running round the inner court."

"But isn't that rather a long way to fetch meals?" Selden asked.

"There is a modern kitchen next to the dining room, sir, but when the meals have been prepared and removed the servants retire to their own quarters, where they have their own meals in the servants' hall."

"You, of course, have your meals by yourself?"

James looked up quickly. "Why, yes, sir. I have a suite of rooms which I will show you if you care to see them. I have a good deal of time on my hands and do a lot of reading. Sir Henry has been kind enough to allow me to make free use of his library, which is next to the chapel."

"Quite so; then it is unlikely that the servants would hear anything in the night. I understand there are two children."

"Yes, sir—a kindly look came to the impassive face—"Miss Joan and Miss Marian; they live in the east wing—but facing the court—as the doctor does not think that the air from the lake is good for them. They have their meals there with Miss Lawrence, the governess."

"Thank you, James. I don't think we need trouble you any further."

"If you wish me to help in any way, sir, I should be always pleased to do what I can."

"I am much obliged. Perhaps you would not mind asking this Mr. Reid to come here."

The butler retired gracefully, as became him, and Hutchins turned to Selden.

"What did he mean by saying he knew his master was murdered?" he asked sharply. "I would have questioned him on that, but you kicked me."

"Only a gentle tap, Inspector," Selden grinned at him. "This grows very interesting. A very remarkable man, that butler. As to asking him how he knew, that's the very last thing to do. What a strange household! all the servants and the children tucked away in the east stable of the building, and no one in the whole of this modern west wing except Sir Henry—with gout—and Lady Severing, and—Colindale!"

Hutchins laughed meaningfully. "Convenient, wasn't it?"

"Judge not harshly," Selden said. "Here's this Reid; I wonder what he's doing in this affair."

Reid's story was quite straightforward. He had been wandering about this part of the country seeking suitable subjects for his modest efforts, and had taken lunch at the Bull Inn. There Hucks had told him of the Abbey, and he had obtained an introduction to Colindale. He only knew Sir Henry by sight—Colindale having obtained permission for his work. He had never spoken to the baronet.

THE INTER-AMERICAN

conference in Buenos Aires, to which President Roosevelt has gone, may not be such a love feast after all.

The governments of some of the South American countries—Brazil among them—are not at all democratic. They are virtually dictatorships. Their ideal is not Roosevelt, but Mussolini and Hitler.

American labor has not looked with whole-hearted enthusiasm on the Roosevelt visit south to the conference. Labor is hopeful that the president will not be "taken in" and enter an inter-American agreement inimical to the spread of unionism.

Brazil and two or three other South American countries have been termed not only party oppositionists but labor organizers as Communists and have been imprisoning and deporting or exiling them. On the other hand, several other Latin American countries are far to the left of the United States, showing high regard for labor.

An inter-American peace, based on equal justice, is highly desirable but an inter-American bloc to preserve dictator government would be a blow to peace, an invitation to warfare, labor holds.

SPAIN ALL OVER AGAIN?

There is danger, indeed, that unless free elections are held in South American countries and the majority of elections be upheld, civil war may result in several countries. Spain may not be an isolated case.

Suppose, for example, that liberals or a labor party should win in any one of the several South American countries? Would the answer not be the same as in Spain? Would not the Fascist elements, powerful in South America, rise up to prevent the duly elected government from assuming power?

That has, of course been a frequent occurrence in South America. There is all the more reason to believe it may be even more frequent now. Powerful interests are on the side of the Fascists. A Communist "scare" has been raised throughout the world.

And the stakes in South America are far greater than in poor, worn-out Spain. Immense resources lay untouched in all the South American countries. They will be the rich lands of the future. Their real career has not yet begun.

The terrible Chaco war was blamed on a battle of contending oil interests—British and American. Will this greed stop suddenly, will exploitation give way to polite exchange of amenities and a peaceful internal development?

NOT AGREED AMONG SELVES

The South American countries are not agreed among themselves, although the enemies are not so inbred and inflammable as in Europe. Latin America is largely of one race.

Yet there is as much difference between Mexico and Brazil as between the Soviet Union and Austria. We shall say. There even is vast difference between the United States and nearby Cuba as to the rights of the individual and the rights of labor.

On the other hand, the United States is closer than ever to Latin America in understanding and appreciation.

There is a strong bond between the United States and Mexico—stronger than ever in history, despite certain denunciations of Mexico in the United States. And there is a growing bond between the United States and all the other countries to the south of Mexico.

But the United States will agree neither with Mexico, on the one hand, nor the large nations to the south, on the other hand on the politico-economic policies which they will represent at the conference.

Labor leans toward Mexico, capital leans toward Brazil and Argentina. The New Deal is supposed to be democratic middle ground. President Roosevelt probably will follow a smiling middle course, help in establishing an inter-American Court of Justice, to aid in keeping the peace in the western hemisphere, try to bring about a bank for inter-American settlement to facilitate credit, and otherwise try to pave the way for a larger interchange of trade.

THE BLOODHOUNDS BAY
By WALTER S. MASTERMAN
COPYRIGHT, RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION
READ THIS FIRST:
Jack Reid, who has just witnessed the mysterious murder of Sir Henry Severing in the chapel of his ancient abbey, is a ne'er-do-well who has lived by his wits since he left an orphanage. In the chapel to steal a valuable jeweled cross. Reid could not identify Sir Henry's slayer and could raise no alarm for fear of incriminating himself. Next day Reid, who has been posing as an itinerant painter working at the abbey, Colonel Graham, a neighbor, and Eric Colindale, agent of the estate who is in love with Lady Severing, trace the missing Sir Henry to the chapel door by means of bloodhounds. The bloodhounds trace Sir Henry's scent to the coffin of his father in the crypt beneath the abbey chapel. Then Colonel Graham, owner of the bloodhounds, announces he will call in Scotland Yard. At the yard, the colonel obtains the services of a young detective, Richard Selden. Back at the abbey, Colonel Graham, Selden and Hutchins, the local police official, go into the crypt and find Sir Henry's body in the coffin of his father. He had been stabbed to death. An urn, containing the ashes of Sir Henry's father, is also in the coffin where it had been placed at his death. During the investigation that follows it is revealed that Sir Henry became a recluse following his marriage a few years previously.
(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)
CHAPTER 11
THE FACT that Sir Henry had been nearly killed at one time and that it had not been an accident came startlingly from Colindale. Hutchins recalled it. "Yes," he said, "I was called in on that case. Sir Henry was walking in the grounds and someone shot at him and wounded him in the shoulder. We never found out who it was. We might have caught it if it was an accident, but the bullet had lodged in his shoulder, and it was a Service bullet from a .303 rifle."
"And you never traced the man who fired?"
It was Colindale who answered. "It was before my time; in fact it was on account of that attack that the post of agent became vacant." He regarded Hutchins questioningly. Hutchins explained:
"We had no proof—not a shadow of evidence, but the former agent, Everitt, was under suspicion. He had quarreled with Sir Henry, and there were grave doubts about him, but he had an alibi that seemed conclusive."
"Thanks very much," Selden said—rather abruptly, Hutchins thought. "We shall see you again soon, I hope. Come to the Bull inn and have a talk some time."
Colindale departed; and Hutchins, who was beginning to understand Selden's rather unusual methods, laughed.
"Colindale was not quite correct," he remarked. "The attack may have had the effect of making Sir Henry keep to the house a bit more, but he was a brave man, even reckless, and would not have been scared in that way to become a mere library haunt in a dressing gown. That took place a little later, after Mr. Colindale had been here for some months, and things were being said—"
"Quite so. I want to know all about that part, but I think I will get it in my own way, if you don't mind."
James Conolly, the butler, was summoned. He had a massive head and a full moon, with large restful eyes, and a straight, almost lipless mouth. The face of the perfect butler, discreet, attentive, knowing his own worth, but never presuming. He stood awaiting orders deferentially.
"Please sit down, James," Selden said in the suave voice that commanded while it persuaded. "We want to talk to you as a man, not as a butler. You have known Sir Henry for a very long time?"
"Very many years, sir," James spoke in a firm, uncompromising tone, nothing more than he cared to say should be spoken. Not a word.
"You were here, of course, when Mr. Colindale came as agent?"
Again Hutchins was struck with admiration at the oblique line of question.
"Yes, sir. I was acting as butler to Sir Henry."
"I suppose you were also present at Sir Henry's wedding?" Selden shot the question at James in a quiet voice; but for a moment the butler was taken off his guard.
"Why, yes, sir. You see, I had been his valet for years, and he asked me to come and see it through."
"In the chapel here?"
"No, sir—the lips closed firmly again—"In London."
"I understand. Sir Henry did not wish to have the wedding here—or was it the bride's wish?"
A troubled look came to James'

Dr. Clendening
and had given him a clean bill of health, but I discovered tubercle bacilli in his sputum, and a fairly advanced spot at the apex of one lung. He went to Colorado, took care of himself, is now actively engaged in business and feels perfectly well.
He certainly is an example of the hopefulness of our methods of treatment of not only early, but, in his case, moderately advanced tuberculosis.
The first piece of advice that the patient in whom tuberculosis has been discovered should take to heart is just that: the hopefulness of treatment. This treatment depends more upon his own co-operation than on any one particular method of treatment. The second piece of advice which he must learn is not to believe in any magical cure by the use of medicine.
The foremost element in the proper treatment of these cases is rest. Many of the patients, on their own initiative, try to get back their health by violent exercise, always to their detriment. It is best to carry out the first six months of the treatment in a sanatorium, because there they learn the discipline of treatment and how to take care of themselves so they do not transmit the disease to others. But the treatment can be carried out at home in any climate. Climate is an unimportant element in treatment.
The second most important element in treatment is plenty of good fresh air—out of doors, if possible, in a room with the windows open day and night, summer and winter, at the very least. The body should be kept well warmed, with mittens and a flannel cap, if necessary, but the air should be available to go into the lungs.
Diet should be nutritious, but the old habit of stuffing these patients, especially with starches and sugars, milk, eggs and cream, has been superseded by three sensible meals a day not composed of such rich foods.
Surgery in tuberculosis has proved to be of great value. The lung can be collapsed and put at rest in many ways. Surgery, of course, in tuberculosis of other parts of the body than the lung—the spine, the hip, the knee, or the kidney—has long since proved itself the most important element in the treatment of these conditions.

face. "I would rather not discuss it if you don't mind, sir—it is rather—painful to me."
Hutchins broke in. "Why, man, what is all this reserve put on for?" he said roughly. "Everyone in the village knows that Sir Henry married a mannequin from a London store, and that was the reason why it was kept quiet."
"I think, Inspector," Selden said severely, "it is hardly fair to ask an old and trusted servant questions involving a scandal. I apologize, James. I won't ask anything more on that. You can't throw any light on this matter which has brought me down from London?"
"You mean, sir, Sir Henry's murder?"
"For a moment the butler's eyes flashed, and then a mask came down and he resumed the quiet dignity he had shown before. "Yes, I mean Sir Henry's murder," Selden said slowly and deliberately.
"No, sir. I found him gone from his room this morning and reported the matter to her ladyship and Mr. Colindale. We searched the whole of the premises but found no trace. Then Colonel Graham came with his bloodhounds. I don't know anything more."
"You are in charge of the indoor staff?"
"Yes, sir; in entire charge, I may say. Sir Henry, for some time now, has delegated everything to me inside the house. I pay servants' salaries and give orders."
"You are really the house steward. It's absurd to call you a butler," Selden remarked; and the butler bowed slightly at the compliment.
"I have already questioned all the staff discreetly, I hope, sir, as to whether they heard anything during the night, but it was hardly likely—they live right at the back."
"Really—that's interesting. Now I wonder, James, whether you could draw me a plan of the house."
"I'm afraid that's not much in my line, sir."
Selden took another sheet of writing paper from the desk.
"Well, if I sketch the outline, you can supply the details perhaps and write the names of the rooms." He smiled at James and drew his outline.
James repeated in general what Colindale had already drawn, but about the back part of the house, James was able to expand.
"This part," he said, "is completely cut off from the rest of the house. The chapel is on one side and the old dining hall on the other. The only connection is by the corridor on the ground floor, running round the inner court."
"But isn't that rather a long way to fetch meals?" Selden asked.
"There is a modern kitchen next to the dining room, sir, but when the meals have been prepared and removed the servants retire to their own quarters, where they have their own meals in the servants' hall."
"You, of course, have your meals by yourself?"
James looked up quickly. "Why, yes, sir. I have a suite of rooms which I will show you if you care to see them. I have a good deal of time on my hands and do a lot of reading. Sir Henry has been kind enough to allow me to make free use of his library, which is next to the chapel."
"Quite so; then it is unlikely that the servants would hear anything in the night. I understand there are twin children."
"Yes, sir—a kindly look came to the impassive face—"Miss Joan and Miss Marian; they live in the east wing—but facing the court—as the doctor does not think that the air from the lake is good for them. They have their meals there with Miss Lawrence, the governess."
"Thank you, James. I don't think we need trouble you any further."
"If you wish me to help in any way, sir, I should be always pleased to do what I can."
"I am much obliged. Perhaps you would not mind asking this Mr. Reid to come here."
The butler retired gracefully, as became him, and Hutchins turned to Selden.
"What did he mean by saying he knew his master was murdered?" he asked sharply. "I would have questioned him on that, but you kicked me."
"Only a gentle tap, Inspector," Selden grinned at him. "This grows very interesting. A very remarkable man, that butler. As to asking him how he knew, that's the very last thing to do. What a strange household: all the servants and the children tucked away in the east part of the building, and no one in the whole of this modern west wing except Sir Henry—with gout—and Lady Severing, and—Colindale!"
Hutchins laughed meaningly. "Convenient, wasn't it?"
"Judge not harshly," Selden said. "Here's this Reid; I wonder what he's doing in this affair."
Reid's story was quite straightforward. He had been wandering about this part of the country seeking suitable subjects for his modest efforts, and had taken lunch at the Bull Inn. There, Hicks had told him of the Abbey, and he had obtained an introduction to Colindale. He only knew Sir Henry by sight—Colindale having obtained permission for his work. He had never spoken to the baronet.

Mrs. McCullough Honors Eastern Star Officers

Miss Hamilton Acts In Installation Monday Evening

Perfect in all its appointments was the dinner served Monday night by Mrs. Mae McCullough, at her home in Pickaway township honoring the 1937 officers of the Eastern Star Chapter, of Kingston.

The dinner was served in two spacious dining rooms at long tables centered with rust and yellow chrysanthemums, and carrying out a color scheme, in the other decorations, of blue and gold. Boutonnieres of yellow button chrysanthemums were used with the placecards as favors.

Thirty-three guests were included. Among those attending were Miss Marie Louise Hamilton, Mrs. Lawrence Johnson, Mrs. Carl Bennett of Circleville, Mr. and Mrs. Gail Roush, Mrs. Mary Ellen Wheeler of Chillicothe, Mr. and Mrs. George Bowers of Laurelville, and Mrs. Helen Jones, Mrs. Minnie Davis of Waverly.

Immediately following the dinner, the installation of officers, with Mrs. McCullough as Worthy Matron, was held in the chapter room in Kingston. At this meeting, Miss Hamilton, worthy grand matron of Ohio, acted as installing officer, assisted by Mrs. Johnson, grand installing marshal; Mrs. Roush, deputy grand matron for the twenty-third district, grand installing chaplain; Mrs. Davis, grand Esther of the Grand Chapter of Ohio, installing organist.

One hundred members and visitors attended the meeting. After a reception was held welcoming the new officers, the meeting was ended with the ritualistic closing of the chapter.

Miss Hamilton Acts In Installation Monday Evening

Perfect in all its appointments was the dinner served Monday night by Mrs. Mae McCullough, at her home in Pickaway township honoring the 1937 officers of the Eastern Star Chapter, of Kingston.

The dinner was served in two spacious dining rooms at long tables centered with rust and yellow chrysanthemums, and carrying out a color scheme, in the other decorations, of blue and gold. Boutonnieres of yellow button chrysanthemums were used with the placecards as favors.

INDICATIONS SHOW LANDIS MAY MAKE BOB FELLER, YOUNG PHENOM, FREE

TWO DECISIONS AT CINCINNATI DISCLOSE TREND

Question of How Cleveland Obtained Youngster Now Up For Ruling

MANIPULATION IS HIT

Youth May Receive $50,000 For Signing Contract

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—(UP)—New signs pointed today to a decision by Baseball Commissioner K. M. Landis declaring Bob (Young) Feller a free agent—plunking $50,000 or more into the path of Cleveland's schoolboy pitching sensation.

Action by the commissioner on two recent cases gave Feller a hint of his future for the first time since his tangled case became a major league issue.

Setting back the Cincinnati Reds in the disputed cases of Lee Handley, infielder, and John G. Peacock, catcher, Judge Landis tipped his hand once more on his stand regarding major league manipulation of minor league players.

Handley and Peacock were declared free agents. They are at liberty to contract with any baseball club except Cincinnati or its affiliates because the Reds "at all times completely dominated and controlled Toronto's attitude XXX and disposition of these players and their contracts."

Same Grounds Used

The Feller case reportedly hinges on whether Bullet Bob was signed legally by a minor league club or by a Cleveland scout in violation of a major-minor league agreement. In the absence of this first contract, however, many baseball observers believe Landis may set him free on the same grounds as Handley and Peacock.

Since this decision may affect several other cases which have not yet come into the open other experts were just as certain the commissioner would hold back the ruling until after the league meetings this month, when the major league agreement not to sign amateur players—except collegians—would be amended or removed.

Most speculation so far has been in favor of the Cleveland club, which picked the 17-year-old Feller off a Cleveland amateur team after New Orleans had placed him on the voluntary retired list with a sore arm. New Orleans, a Cleveland farm, had obtained him from Fargo-Moorhead of the Northern league, presumably Feller's first professional boss.

The Indians used him in an exhibition game against the St. Louis Cardinals July 6 and he struck out eight batters in three innings. Thereafter, he established himself as the pitching find of the decade.

PITT IS VOTED LAMBERT TROPHY BY SPORTS MEN

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—(UP)—The August V. Lambert memorial trophy, emblematic of the eastern football championship, will be presented to the University of Pittsburgh within 10 days.

A committee of 10 New York sports writers decided that the first award of the trophy, a natural sized golden football, should go to Pitt, but University of Pennsylvania's team, which received honorable mention, ran a close second.

Pitt will retain the trophy until conclusion of the 1937 season and the first school that wins the trophy three times takes permanent possession.

High, Low Spots of Grid Season

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—(UP)—High and low spots of the humpty-dumpty football season:

BEST BIG TEAM:—Minnesota, conqueror of Washington, far western champion and Nebraska.

BEST LITTLE TEAM:—Western Reserve of Cleveland, unbeaten in nine games.

UP-SIDE-DOWN CHAMPIONS:—Notre Dame which came back to beat Army and Northwestern after being routed by Pitt and beaten by Navy.

BIGGEST UPSET:—West Virginia Wesleyan's 2-0 victory over Duquesne the week after the Dukes had topped Pitt, 7-0.

GREATEST SINGLE GAME COMEBACK:—Baylor, trailing by 18 points, scoring 21 points in the final period to beat Texas.

Billy Myers Prepares For Year's Business

CINCINNATI, Dec. 1.—The anxiety that has been prevalent within the ranks of the Cincinnati Reds about the condition of their young shortstop, Billy Myers, vanished with the arrival of definite word that everything is okay with the boy on whose shoulders rest much of the team's chances for 1937 success.

WRITER HONORS MASSILLON AND MARTINS FERRY

COLUMBUS, Dec. 1.—(UP)—The grid glory that goes to a team which accomplishes the super feat of finishing a football campaign undefeated and untied today was lavished up five major Ohio scholastic events.

From out of the unwieldy group of 437 schools that started the season in mid-September with championship visions only Cleveland West Tech, Kenton, Martins Ferry, Massillon and Middletown were able to push aside their weekly obstacles and avoid being caught by the upset landslide that hit the football world this fall.

The number of title claimants this season is smaller than usual. The 1934 season produced 10 perfect record teams and a year ago nine combines finished in the select class.

Partisan supporters of the five unbeaten and untied teams would belittle efforts to name an eleven other than their own favorite as a mythical state titlist. However, close observers of scholastic football are agreed there is justification for the division of the combines into three classes.

The ranking, made principally on the basis of the type of schedule played, follows:

(1)—Massillon and Martins Ferry

(2)—Middletown

(3)—Cleveland West Tech and Kenton.

COAST TO PICK EASTERN BOWL FOE NEXT WEEK

SEATTLE, Dec. 1.—(UP)—The eastern Rose Bowl opponent of University of Washington will be named at a Pacific coast conference meeting in Pasadena, Dec. 7 or 8.

Coach Jimmy Phelan said today: "I feel reasonably certain our opponent for the Rose Bowl will not be named officially until the conference meeting." Phelan said.

"We will place the nomination before the entire conference for approval, although Washington will do the selecting. We are going to invite the strongest available team and we aren't going to make mistakes by hurrying."

The Huskies will go into training for the game Dec. 12.

High, Low Spots of Grid Season

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—(UP)—High and low spots of the humpty-dumpty football season:

More Mat Cards

If next Monday evening's mat and fight card at the Athletic Club is a success you can rest assured that similar offerings will take place regularly during the winter.

Several persons have been skeptical concerning how Stacy Hall, Spike Ashby and other grapplers of known ability can come here when the size of the crowd does not guarantee them a big cut in proceeds. All grapplers performing next Monday evening are from the stable of Al Haft in Columbus.

All are on Haft's payroll for so much a month whether they fight or whether they do not. Haft is booking them in Circleville hoping to put the mat game on a sound basis. If successful Haft will return some of his boys to Circleville at various times.

Local Boys Listed

Circleville youths will have a big part in the evening's entertainment with Eddie Watson taking on the tough Ashby in a grunt match, Doc Ferguson and Glenn Weaver meeting in a boxing encounter, and Jimmy Emerine tangling with Bob Alexander in the curtain-raiser jitsu/squabble.

THE ENTIRE CARD PROMISES TO BE VERY INTERESTING.

Veenker Out, Too

It's open season on coaches—George Veenker, former Notre Dame assistant, has turned in his toga at Iowa State—Jack Chevigny, at Texas, has declared himself through, and several other mentors are expected to be on the way out pretty soon.

One of these may be Bernie Bierman, Minnesota's great director, who is reported on his way back to Tulane—Francis Schmidt has another year contract, for which this column is very pleased—Win or lose, Schmidt's boys always put up a ball game.

This Mykrantz bowling team seems to be the cream of the city's competition. The outfit has lost only one match this winter, that by a two-in-three decision—Lou Vining, last year's No. 1 average man, is leading the team again with Carroll Woodruff, Warren Baker, Bob Terhune, and Tod Thompson in the supporting roles.

INDICATIONS SHOW LANDIS MAY MAKE BOB FELLER, YOUNG PHENOM, FREE

TWO DECISIONS AT CINCINNATI DISCLOSE TREND

Question of How Cleveland Obtained Youngster Now Up For Ruling

MANIPULATION IS HIT

Youth May Receive $50,000 For Signing Contract

CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—(UP)—New signs pointed today to a decision by Baseball Commissioner K. M. Landis declaring Bob (Young) Feller a free agent—plunking $50,000 or more into the path of Cleveland's schoolboy pitching sensation.

Action by the commissioner on two recent cases gave Feller a hint of his future for the first time since his tangled case became a major league issue.

Setting back the Cincinnati Reds in the disputed cases of Lee Handley, infielder, and John G. Peacock, catcher, Judge Landis tipped his hand once more on his stand regarding major league manipulation of minor league players.

Handley and Peacock were declared free agents. They are at liberty to contract with any baseball club except Cincinnati or its affiliates because the Reds "at all times completely dominated and controlled Toronto's attitude XXX and disposition of these players and their contracts."

Same Grounds Used

The Feller case reportedly hinges on whether Bullet Bob was signed legally by a minor league club or by a Cleveland scout in violation of a major-minor league agreement. In the absence of this first contract, however, many baseball observers believe Landis may set him free on the same grounds as Handley and Peacock.

Since this decision may affect several other cases which have not yet come into the open other experts were just as certain the commissioner would hold back the ruling until after the league meetings this month, when the major league agreement not to sign amateur players—except collegians—would be amended or removed.

Most speculation so far has been in favor of the Cleveland club, which picked the 17-year-old Feller off a Cleveland amateur team after New Orleans had placed him on the voluntary retired list with a sore arm. New Orleans, a Cleveland farm, had obtained him from Fargo-Moorhead of the Northern league, presumably Feller's first professional boss.

The Indians used him in an exhibition game against the St. Louis Cardinals July 6 and he struck out eight batters in three innings. Thereafter, he established himself as the pitching find of the decade.

PITT IS VOTED LAMBERT TROPHY BY SPORTS MEN

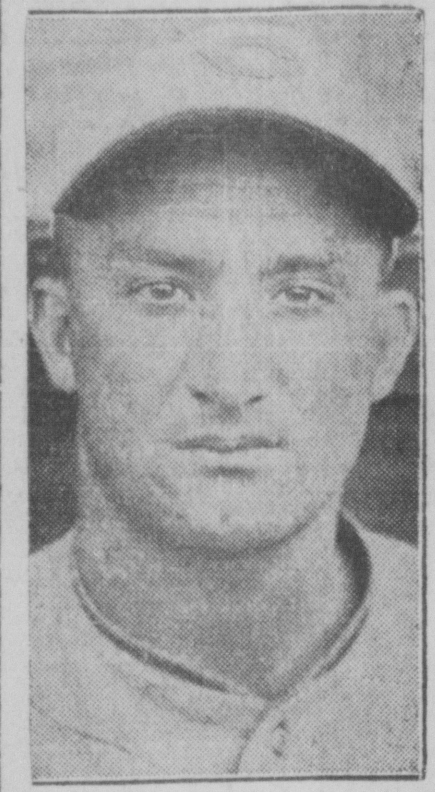

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—(UP)—The August V. Lambert memorial trophy, emblematic of the eastern football championship, will be presented to the University of Pittsburgh within 10 days.

A committee of 10 New York sports writers decided that the first award of the trophy, a natural sized golden football, should go to Pitt, but University of Pennsylvania's team, which received honorable mention, ran a close second.

Pitt will retain the trophy until conclusion of the 1937 season and the first school that wins the trophy three times takes permanent possession.

Billy Myers Prepares For Year's Business

CINCINNATI, Dec. 1.—The anxiety that has been prevalent within the ranks of the Cincinnati Reds about the condition of their young shortstop, Billy Myers, vanished with the arrival of definite word that everything is okay with the boy on whose shoulders rest much of the team's chances for 1937 success.

WRITER HONORS MASSILLON AND MARTINS FERRY

COLUMBUS, Dec. 1.—(UP)—The grid glory that goes to a team which accomplishes the super feat of finishing a football campaign undefeated and untied today was lavished upon five major Ohio scholastic eleven.

From out of the unwieldy group of 437 schools that started the season in mid-September with championship visions only Cleveland West Tech, Kenton, Martins Ferry, Massillon and Middletown were able to push aside their weekly obstacles and avoid being caught by the upset landslide that hit the football world this fall.

The number of title claimants this season is smaller than usual. The 1934 season produced 10 perfect record teams and a year ago nine combines finished in the select class.

Partisan supporters of the five unbeaten and untied teams would belittle efforts to name an eleven other than their own favorite as a mythical state titlist. However, close observers of scholastic football are agreed there is justification for the division of the combines into three classes.

The ranking, made principally on the basis of the type of schedule played, follows:

- (1)—Massillon and Martins Ferry
- (2)—Middletown
- (3)—Cleveland West Tech and Kenton.

COAST TO PICK EASTERN BOWL Foe NEXT WEEK

SEATTLE, Dec. 1.—(UP)—The eastern Rose Bowl opponent of University of Washington will be named at a Pacific coast conference meeting in Pasadena, Dec. 7 or 8, Coach Jimmy Phelan said today.

"I feel reasonably certain our opponent for the Rose Bowl will not be named officially until the conference meeting," Phelan said. "We will place the nomination before the entire conference for approval, although Washington will do the selecting. We are going to invite the strongest available team and we aren't going to make mistakes by hurrying."

The Huskies will go into training for the game Dec. 12.

About This And That In Many Sports

More Mat Cards

If next Monday evening's mat and fight card at the Athletic Club is a success you can rest assured that similar offerings will take place regularly during the winter. Several persons have been skeptical concerning how Stacy Hall, Spike Ashby and other grapplers of known ability can come here when the size of the crowd does not guarantee them a big cut in proceeds. All grapplers performing next Monday evening are from the stable of Al Haft in Columbus. All are on Haft's payroll for so much a month whether they fight or whether they do not. Haft is booking them in Circleville hoping to put the mat game on a sound basis. If successful Haft will return some more of his boys to Circleville at various times. ***

Local Boys Listed

Circleville youths will have a big part in the evening's entertainment with Eddie Watson taking on the tough Ashby in a grunt match, Doc Ferguson and Glenn Weaver meeting in a boxing encounter, and Jimmy Emerine tangling with Bob Alexander in the curtain-raiser fisticuff squabble. ***

THE ENTIRE CARD PROMISES TO BE VERY INTERESTING. ***

Veenker Out, Too

It's open season on coaches. George Veenker, former Notre Dame assistant, has turned in his toga at Iowa State. Jack Chevigny, at Texas, has declared himself through, and several other mentors are expected to be on the way out pretty soon. One of these may be Bernie Bierman, Minnesota's great director, who is reported on his way back to Tulane. Francis Schmidt has this column is very pleased. Win or lose, Schmidt's boys always put up a ball game. ***

This Mykranitz bowling team seems to be the cream of the city's competition. The outfit has lost only one match this winter, that by a two-in-three decision. Lou Vining, last year's No. 1 average man, is leading the team again with Carroll Woodruff, Warren Baker, Bob Terhune, and Tod Thompson in the supporting roles. ***

WISE BIDDERS—WISE DEFENDERS

IT IS REFRESHING to find a bidder with the courage of his convictions, and a partner wise enough to realize that the other probably is right. The deal today illustrates how a well-paired team should finally reach the best call for their joint holdings. The deal illustrates as well how perfect defense may turn what appears a certain game into a losing contract.

and welcome. Wisely, as it appeared, West passed.

The ordinary lead of South's fourth best heart would have given East the game. He then must have lost one heart trick and two tricks to the two black Aces. South, however, saw a chance to defeat the contract, so he led his lone diamond, which dummy's Q took. Dummy's only spade was led. Declarer played his 10 and South was in with the Ace. For a moment it seemed as if South's strategy had failed, but he led a low heart, putting dummy in lead, and declarer in a hole.

Declarer knew that South held no more diamonds. The only thing was to lead a club, and hope. North's Ace of clubs won the fourth trick. South ruffed a diamond lead. A heart was led back and North was in again, giving the defenders the setting trick. A diamond was led back, but declarer shut out South, by ruffing with an honor, then he picked up that defender's last two trumps, by leading off the K and Q. The rest of the tricks belonged to declarer.

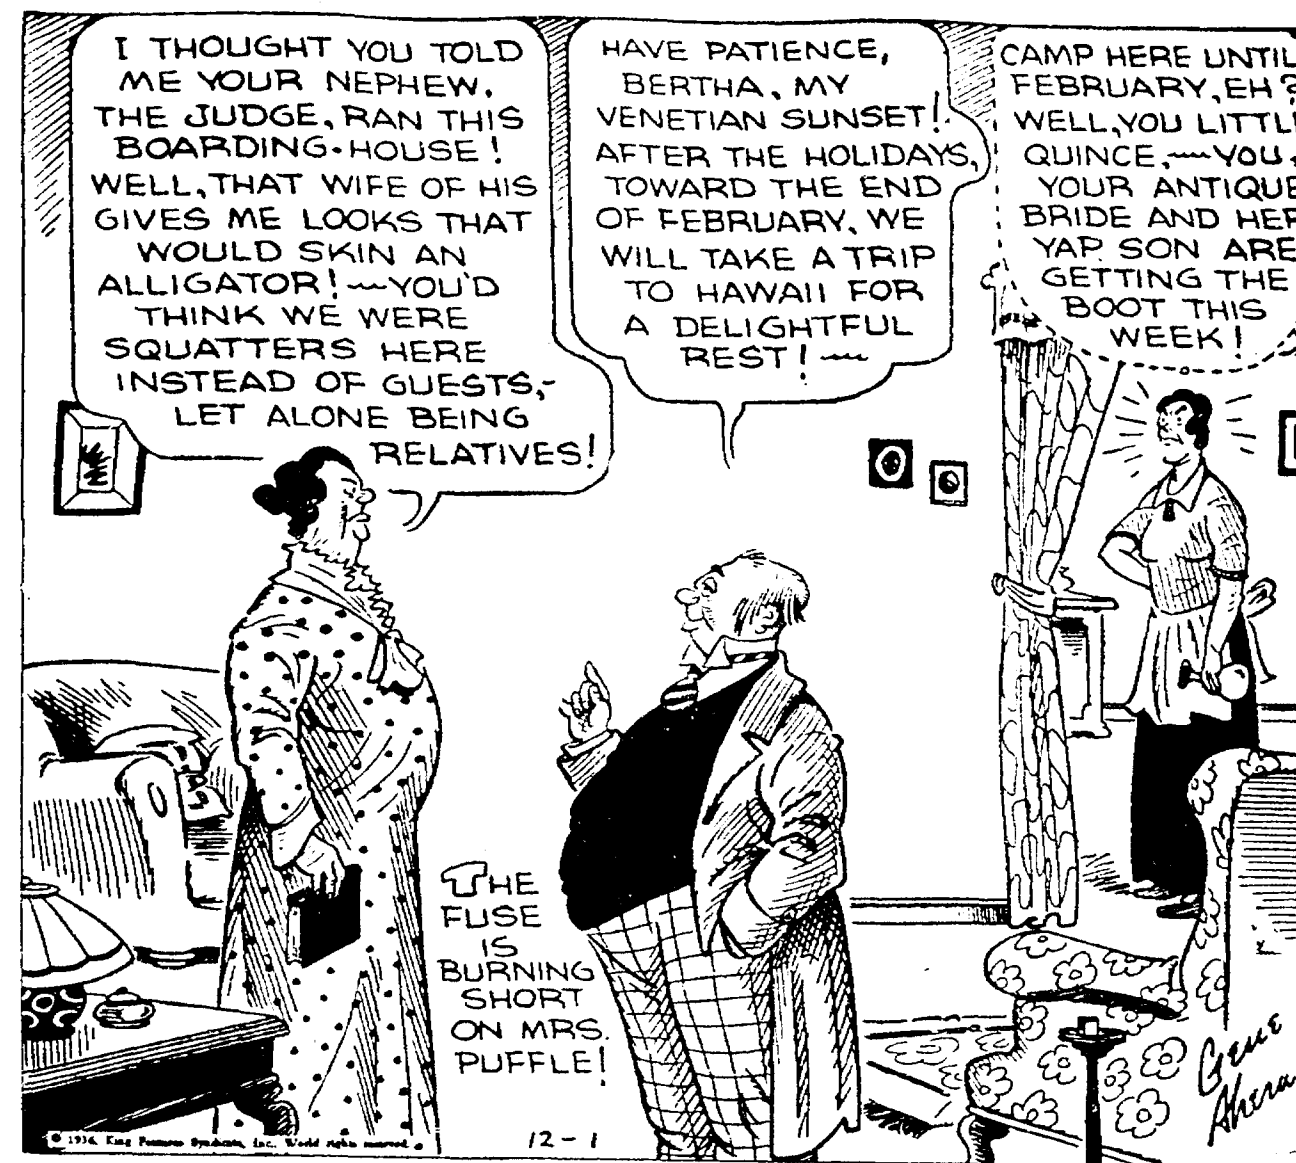

To reach the best call for the joint holdings—the only call capable of going game against stock defense—and then to be defeated by exceptionally able defense is tough. Had West played the deal, either at clubs or diamonds, he could not have gone game. At either minor suit call he had to lose to the Ace of spades, the Ace of clubs and to North's J of diamonds. He could not have entered dummy to obtain a discard on its established spades.

Bidding went: West, 2-Clubs, demanding bidding he kept open until at least game could be named, promising a game at the best call for the joint holdings: North, 2-Hearts; East, 2-Spades; West, 3-Diamonds. East saw eight trumps for his side at either minor suit call, but he knew that four hands will make 4-odd to one able to make 5-odd, so he bid 3-Spades; West, 4-Clubs; East, 4-Spades, the first call to name game. If West chose to venture five in either minor suit he might have the call,

NEGRO ARRESTED FOR QUESTIONING CONCERNING AUTO AND HIT-SKIP WRECK

COLUMBUS MAN TAKEN TO JAIL FOR GRILLING

Walter Williams, 28, Caught at Pearl Avenue Home Early Tuesday

TAKEN TO CAPITAL CITY

Officers Investigate Theft of Ford Automobile

Walter Williams, 28, negro, of 554 E. Spring street, Columbus, was returned to the capital city Tuesday morning from the county jail to face investigation in an auto theft and a hit-skip accident.

Williams was arrested early Tuesday by the sheriff's department and city police at a residence on Pearl avenue where he was visiting friends. His arrest resulted from a call the sheriff's department received from J. H. Stout, E. Main street garage proprietor.

Follows Burned Bearing

Officers said the garage was called after Williams burned out a bearing on a 1936 Ford car he was driving on Route 23 near Gold Cliff Chateau. The car was towed to the garage and Stout said he was suspicious of the man's actions. He inquired of Stout how he would return for the car Tuesday morning.

Sheriff Charles Radcliff called Columbus police and learned the car Williams was driving had been stolen several days ago and is said to have been involved in a hit-skip accident.

Officers were told a negro, answering the description of Williams, was seen get on a coal truck and go west out of Circleville. Officers of London stopped the truck and the negro was brought to Mt. Sterling for identification. He was released.

Later officers went to a Pearl avenue home and located Williams.

World's Youngest Opera Singer Prepares For Her "Big Moment"

CHICAGO. — Until a few weeks ago Betty Jane Schultz was an inconspicuous 15-year-old school girl. In a few more weeks she will be hailed as the "world's youngest opera singer."

Her debut with the Chicago City Opera company is scheduled for the evening of Dec. 3, when she will sing the lead role of Mimi in the opera "La Boheme". Professionally she will be known as Betty Jane.

Movie Contract
She has signed a contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, which gives that studio an option on her. The success of her auditions before M-G-M representatives has made it necessary for her mother to begin thinking of how life will be in Hollywood.

In making her opera debut Betty fulfills her late father's loftiest ambitions. Dr. Schultz, a dentist on Chicago's South Side, took a great pride in her soprano voice and she often sang for him. She was only 11 when he was stricken with pneumonia and died.

Two years ago Mrs. Schultz carried out her father's wish for Betty by engaging a vocal teacher. The teacher was amazed by her talent and took her to the studios of Madame Devries, voice teacher, who also was impressed.

A band leader, looking forward to his concert at Grand Park, was among those who heard Betty sing. He asked her to sing at the concert. The applause which greeted her renditions of several Victor Herbert compositions portended early success.

Fertune Smiles
Madame Devries asked Paul Longone, general manager of the opera company, to come to her studio to hear Betty sing. That was the stroke that virtually assured her fame. He immediately asked her to sign with the opera to sing this season.

Betty has had to forsake school and has been rehearsing three or more hours seven days a week since she signed the contract on Sept. 24. She has been taking private tutoring in foreign languages to prepare her for opera performances.

Mrs. Schultz had frequently taken Betty to opera, but the thought that she would ever become an opera star was beyond the grandest dreams of either. Betty ranks as her favorite operas "Carmen", "Madame Butterfly", "Martha" and "Faust." She hopes to sing "Madame Butterfly", "Martha" four, light wavy hair, and big blue eyes. Betty looks forward to a concert tour of Europe, radio singing and a career in the movies. She is the oldest in a family of three girls and one boy.

Her Favorites
Jeanette MacDonald, the glorious songbird of the movies, is her favorite actress. A recent letter from Miss MacDonald provided a real thrill for Betty. Nelson Eddy, often co-starred in singing roles with Miss MacDonald, is her favorite masculine star.

A good swimmer, a tennis enthusiast, and an able horseback rider summarize Betty's sport accomplishments.

She goes to be early, as early as 7:30, because she regards ample rest as one of the most important factors in keeping herself in the best trim for the exciting, eventful life ahead of her.

NEGRO ARRESTED FOR QUESTIONING CONCERNING AUTO AND HIT-SKIP WRECK

COLUMBUS MAN TAKEN TO JAIL FOR GRILLING

Walter Williams, 28, Caught at Pearl Avenue Home Early Tuesday

TAKEN TO CAPITAL CITY

Officers Investigate Theft of Ford Automobile

Walter Williams, 28, negro, of 554 E. Spring street, Columbus, was returned to the capital city Tuesday morning from the county jail to face investigation in an auto theft and a hit-skip accident.

Williams was arrested early Tuesday by the sheriff's department and city police at a residence on Pearl avenue where he was visiting friends. His arrest resulted from a call the sheriff's department received from J. H. Stout, E. Main street garage proprietor.

Follows Burned Bearing

Officers said the garage was called after Williams burned out a bearing on a 1936 Ford car he was driving on Route 23 near Gold Cliff Chateau. The car was towed to the garage and Stout said he was suspicious of the man's actions. He inquired of Stout how to find Pearl avenue and said he would return for the car Tuesday morning.

Sheriff Charles Radcliff called Columbus police and learned the car Williams was driving had been stolen several days ago and is said to have been involved in a hit-skip accident.

Officers were told a negro, answering the description of Williams, was seen get on a coal truck and go west out of Circleville. Officers of London stopped the truck and the negro was brought to Mt. Sterling for identification. He was released.

Later officers went to a Pearl avenue home and located Williams.

World's Youngest Opera Singer Prepares For Her "Big Moment"

CHICAGO, — Until a few weeks ago Betty Jane Schultz was an inconspicuous 15-year-old school girl. In a few more weeks she will be hailed as the "world's youngest opera singer."

Her debut with the Chicago City Opera company is scheduled for the evening of Dec. 3, when she will sing the lead role of Mimi in the opera "La Boheme". Professionally she will be known as Betty Jane.

Movie Contract

She has signed a contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, which gives that studio an option on her. The success of her auditions before M-G-M representatives has made it necessary for her mother to begin thinking of how life will be in Hollywood.

In making her opera debut Betty fulfills her late father's loftiest ambitions. Dr. Schultz, a dentist on Chicago's South Side, took a great pride in her soprano voice and she often sang for him. She was only 11 when he was stricken with pneumonia and died.

Two years ago Mrs. Schultz carried out her father's wish for Betty by engaging a vocal teacher. The teacher was amazed by her talent and took her to the studios of Madame Devries, voice teacher, who also was impressed.

A hand leader, looking forward to his concert at Grand Park, was among those who heard Betty sing. He asked her to sing at the concert. The applause which greeted her renditions of several Victor Herbert compositions portended early success.

Madame Devries asked Paul

Longone, general manager of the opera company, to come to her studio to hear Betty sing. That was the stroke that virtually assured her fame. He immediately asked her to sign with the opera to sing this season.

Betty has had to forsake school and has been rehearsing three or more hours seven days a week since she signed the contract on Sept. 24. She has been taking private tutoring in foreign languages to prepare her for opera performances.

Mrs. Schultz had frequently taken Betty to opera, but the thought that she would ever become an opera star was beyond the grandest dreams of either. Betty ranks as her favorite operas "Carmen", "Madame Butterfly", "Martha", and "Faust". She hopes to sing "Madame Butterfly", "Martha" four, light wavy hair, and big blue eyes. Betty looks forward to a concert tour of Europe, radio singing and a career in the movies. She is the oldest in a family of three girls and one boy.

Her Favorites

Jeanette MacDonald, the glorious songbird of the movies, is her favorite actress. A recent letter from Miss MacDonald provided a real thrill for Betty. Nelson Eddy, often co-starred in singing roles with Miss MacDonald, is her favorite masculine star. A good swimmer, a tennis enthusiast, and an able horseback rider summarize Betty's sport accomplishments.

She goes to be early, as early as 7:30, because she regards ample rest as one of the most important factors in keeping herself in the best trim for the exciting, eventful life ahead of her.
